

The Graduate School „Competitiveness of Young Enterprises“ (WEJU) funded by the Jürgen Manchot Foundation at the Faculty of Business Administration and Economics of Heinrich Heine University Duesseldorf awards

up to four doctoral scholarships, start date: nearest possible date.

The duration of the scholarships is initially limited to 24 months. After a successful interim evaluation, it is possible to submit an application for an extension of the scholarship for another twelve months. The scholarship includes an allowance in the amount of 1.600 € per month. Furthermore, it includes a fixed budget for travel and other expenses. Travel expenses may cover the mandatory stay abroad during the second year of the scholarship and conference participations.

The scholarships are part of the Manchot Graduate School „Competitiveness of Young Enterprises“ (WEJU) at the Faculty of Business Administration and Economics. The main research areas are located within interdisciplinary clusters. The central topics are: (1) young enterprises as employers, (2) innovation in young enterprises, (3) new financing options for young enterprises and (4) digitization in young enterprises.

The call for applications addresses highly qualified candidates with a university degree in business administration (master level) or in an associated subject with a focus on at least one of the research areas or from associated research areas. We are looking for ambitious candidates aiming to tackle relevant research questions on the competitiveness of young enterprises. In addition, candidates should be willing to engage in the international research community.
